ABOUT ME

Allison Alane Jewelry is where timeless design meets bold, feminine expression. While each collection is a destination in itself, the heart of the brand is about empowering you to take on the world: adorned, unique, and truly confident. Every piece combines rich textures, vibrant gemstones, and mixed metals, handcrafted in Brooklyn using 100% recycled gold and silver paired with ethically sourced gemstones. Inspired by travel, storytelling, and meaningful connection, this is jewelry for the journey and for the woman writing her own story.

A World of Color, Told in Stone

Color has always been part of my language. Not as decoration, but as feeling, memory and atmosphere.

Each Allison Alane collection begins with a place, and every place carries its own palette. Not loud or literal, but layered, nuanced, and alive. Stones chosen not to match, but to converse.

Recycled 14k Yellow Gold and Sterling Silver

Sustainably Sourced Precious and Semi-Precious Stones

Woman-Owned, Emerging Designer

Handmade to Order in Brooklyn, USA

My love of jewelry and travel started early, sparked by an inherited treasure chest of costume jewelry from my great aunt, who once worked for the CIA and lived all over the world - Cyprus, Japan, Burma, Switzerland. Bold and distinct, like fragments of her journey, I'd try them on to feel beautiful, but also to feel brave. I would lose myself playing explorer, uncovering hidden stories in their shapes and stones, dreaming of places I had yet to see. Even then, I knew - jewelry could hold the spirit of a place, carry the memory of a journey, and bring the whole world together in a little girl's bedroom.

Dame Whina Cooper (1895–1994) was a fearless Māori leader who changed New Zealand history through courage, conviction, and compassion. At 79, she led the 1975 Māori Land March across the country, declaring “Not one more acre of Māori land” and forcing the nation to confront generations of injustice.

In a world dominated by male voices, she stood as a powerful kuia - spiritual and moral female guide - whose authority came from lived experience, moral strength, and unwavering love for her people. Her leadership proved that women, especially Indigenous women, could move a nation, reshape its conscience, and leave a legacy that still guides the country today.

THE COCKTAIL RINGS

I design one-of-a-kind cocktail rings because the style itself has always stood for confidence, individuality, and quiet rebellion. Rising to prominence in the 1920s during Prohibition, cocktail rings were bold, oversized, and colorful, meant to be seen, to catch the light mid-gesture, and to tell a story before a word was spoken.

That spirit guides my process: each ring is fully hand-fabricated as a singular piece, never repeated, using colored gemstones chosen for how their hues, depth, and emotional resonance interact and come alive together. Every design is inspired by a remarkable woman from history, tied to the country of each collection, with her name and legacy shaping the form, scale, and energy of the piece. While the inspiration remains constant, I subtly alter each iteration, allowing the ring - like the women who inspire them - to feel powerful, personal, and entirely its own.

Flora MacDonald (1722 – 1790) is one of the most celebrated women in Scottish history, remembered for her courage and loyalty during the Jacobite uprising of 1745. After the defeat of Bonnie Prince Charlie at the Battle of Culloden, he became a fugitive, hunted across the Highlands by British forces. Flora risked her life to help him escape, disguising him as her maid and secretly ferrying him across the sea to the Isle of Skye.

Her bold act became a powerful symbol of Highland bravery and resistance, later immortalized in the beloved “Skye Boat Song,” with the lyrics: “Rocked in the deep, Flora will keep / Watch by your weary head... Over the sea to Skye.”

ORCHID PROMISE

Take a closer look at each collection I design and you'll find tiny orchids of gold and silver planted in each. These are part of my Orchid Promise initiative. I am deeply aware of the impact our actions as humans have on the environment. Acknowledging jewelry fabrication utilizes materials that must be extracted from the earth, I have developed the Orchid Promise: 20% of all profits from my signature orchid designs in each collection are donated to a nonprofit helping to protect the orchid rainforest habitat. I have chosen the orchid because in their natural habitat they function as "canaries in a coal mine," alerting scientists to the initial signs of climate breakdown and the necessity to act. Orchids grow on every continent (except Antarctica) and can be found in a wide range of habitats - tropical forests, semi-desert regions, near the seashore and the tundra. This means almost every destination you travel to you might come across some species of orchid. A beautiful reminder that although our planet is vast, it is not disconnected.

Britain has been shaped by strong female leaders - queens who have often proven themselves formidable rulers. Queen Elizabeth I (1533 – 1603) was one of Britain’s most influential and successful monarchs. Under her leadership, the nation saw great economic and cultural growth.

The daughter of Henry VIII, Elizabeth I was the last monarch of the House of Tudor. She was admired for her courage, intelligence and independence. Her 45-year reign, known as the Elizabethan era, or the ‘Golden Age’, saw a cultural renaissance. Explorers voyaged across the world in her name, while the arts flourished - notably with the success of writers such as William Shakespeare.

Singer Édith Piaf (1915 – 1963) was one of the most iconic performers and rose to international stardom in the late 1930's as a symbol of French passion and tenacity. Of Piaf's many signature ballads, "La Vie en Rose" continues to be revered as a national treasure.

During WWII, Édith was living in Nazi-occupied Paris, but her voice could be heard everywhere on the front line. When she became so successful that she was invited to perform in Germany, she joined the resistance, risking her life to save thousands. Édith passed false documents to camp prisoners under the guise of signing autographs. For many, it helped them find their way to freedom.

Considered by many to be one of the greatest jazz vocalists of all time, Billie Holiday (1915 – 1959) triumphed over adversity to forever change the genres of jazz and pop music with her unique styling and interpretation in the vibrant Harlem Renaissance.

In 1938, she was invited to headline an orchestra by Artie Shaw, and became the first African American woman to work with an all-white band. Many scholars now consider “Strange Fruit”, based on a horrors of lynching in the South, one of the first protest songs of the Civil Rights Movement.

Gloria Steinem (1934 –), an acclaimed journalist and trailblazing feminist, is one of the most visible, passionate leaders of the women’s rights movement. Steinem’s life has been dedicated to the cause of women’s rights, leading marches around the country. Steinem started her professional career as a journalist in New York. At New York magazine, Steinem reported on political campaigns and progressive social issues, sparking her feminism and engagement with the women’s liberation movement.

Adorned by Adventure: The Timeless Tales of Allison Alane Jewelry

Michelle Mullen
January 29, 2025

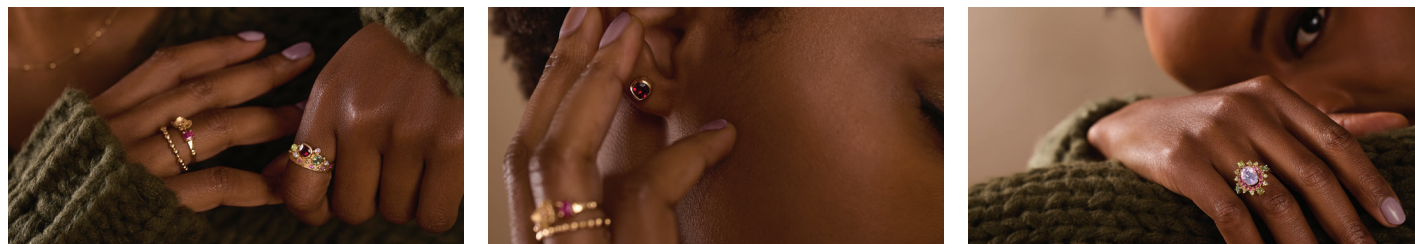

In the world of Allison Alane Jewelry, adventure and artistry intertwine, weaving stories from far-flung corners of the globe into timeless treasures. Through her craft, Allison invites us to embrace wanderlust and celebrate the profound beauty of connection—where each piece tells a tale, and every detail evokes the soul of a journey well-lived. Step into her world and discover jewelry that doesn't just adorn but transports.

How would you describe the aesthetic and ethos of Allison Alane Jewelry to someone discovering your brand for the first time?

At Allison Alane, the mission is to inspire and empower through sustainable jewelry, reflecting stories of adventure and connection. Here, you'll be swept away through a travel diary of vivid gemstones and repeating rhythmic forms perfect for layering and stacking with everyday elegance. Allison Alane's values of creativity, care, and craftsmanship shine through in every design made just for you.

What role does sustainability or ethical sourcing play in your creative and production process?

Allison Alane offers expertly-crafted, durable, and sustainable recycled solid gold and sterling silver jewelry hand fabricated completely in-house. Choosing the highest standards when selecting my raw materials, I also maintain affordability and offer an ethically sourced product whenever possible. Allison Alane partners with Ethical Metalsmiths to guarantee the use of traceable stones, reclaimed diamonds and 100% recycled metals. In practice, that means every item – from raw material to finished product – which enters and leaves my studio is made with the highest level of creativity and care.

Your collections often feel deeply personal—do you draw inspiration from your own life experiences or travels?

My inspiration is directly drawn from my love of travel and how it brings me to some of the most compelling cities around the world. For each new discovery, I design a collection based on that city, inviting my clients along for the journey. With my jewelry, I celebrate wanderlust – the longing to discover and the desire to embrace adventure. Each collection a destination, each piece a moment savored from my travels. The descriptions become my travel diary. My jewelry is designed to sweep you far away and bring the world a little closer.

What is your process for translating inspiration—whether from art, nature, or culture—into physical pieces?

I begin the design process upon arrival in my chosen city. I start to pick up color inspiration and form motifs – perhaps a pattern in the architecture or landscape. The longer I stay, my perspective deepens with my impression of the overall mood of the city and its people. Once I'm back in my studio, I select gemstones. Like a painter choosing her palette, I pair colors with great intention. Finding unexpected combinations, mixing precious and semi-precious gemstones that aren't often seen together, allows me to highlight the unique signature of my cities and my jewelry. I introduce several new stones for each collection, continuing a conversation with my clients, and sharing the distinct values and history of the gemstones and how they often contain a secret story.

What materials and techniques do you love working with most, and why?

The majority of my pieces are made with the technique called full-fabrication. I start with flat sheets and wire of raw gold and sterling silver metal and then I cut, forge, and shape them into their final forms. This is not a common technique used today, as most of the jewelry industry is mass-produced and designed with 3D software. Full-fabrication requires a lot of hands-on skill and artistry to master the metals into your vision, but it also leaves a signature of the human hand behind, a quality you don't get by printing 3D models. Each is a tiny sculpture made one at a time by hand, celebrating my love for the slow-made art in a fast moving, modern world. This means that each piece is imbued with durability and integrity intended to last throughout our lifetime and for generations to come.

Do you have a specific customer or type of person in mind when you design your collections?

I design and fabricate jewelry for people who view the world as a place of adventure and connection. They are not afraid of color and making a statement. To me, each piece of jewelry should be unique, like each of us. This is how I want my jewelry to make people feel. I hope to evoke a sense of wonder surrounding the work – handcrafted and ready to be taken on your own adventure, whether it's an epic journey or the memorable moments found in the everyday. My jewelry is for individuals who are ready to transition away from mass-produced and trend-dependent pieces. Good design and meaningful relationships come from collaboration. I'm inspired by listening to people's own travel stories, and designing something enduring together. I offer the ability for my clients to customize their pieces. Swapping stones and metals to personalize how each individually connects with the world. We all see the world differently, and our jewelry should embrace that.

Our readers love to travel, what destination is at the top of your bucket list?

I continuously have a short list of travel destinations top of mind, ready to be charted and turned into inspiration for Allison Alane collections. I just returned from Barcelona, Spain and I am already daydreaming about Norway, Iceland, Thailand, and Tahiti.
